

What is the best way to be a friend in each of these scenarios?

Put them in order (1-4) of the best thing to do – to the worst thing to do.

1. Your friend is at your place hanging out and they don't want to do any of the activities you had planned. You:

_____ Keep arguing and pressuring your friend to do what you want.
_____ Negotiate to find something else you both want to do.
_____ Tell your friend if they don't want to do what you want, they should go home.
_____ Just do what your friend wants to "keep the peace".

2. You notice the people are making negative and attacking comments on a social networking site about another student. You:

_____ Decide not to join in.
_____ Stand up for them and tell a trusted adult to make sure it doesn't happen again.
_____ Laugh and join in.
_____ Stand up for the person being attacked.

3. Your best friend is sad because their pet fish died. You:

_____ Laugh, make jokes and ask inappropriate questions about flushing the dead fish down the toilet.
_____ Tell your friend to get over it, because it's only a fish.
_____ Give your friend sympathy and be there for them in whatever way they want support.
_____ Ignore the fact that your friend is sad and tell them to get on with their day.

What is the best way to be a friend in each of these scenarios?

Put them in order (1-4) of the best thing to do – to the worst thing to do.

4. You take an embarrassing photo of your friend during a sleepover. Your other friends want you to share it with other people. You:

_____ Say no and tell your friends they are being mean.

_____ Say no and explain to them why it's not okay to share someone's photo with their permission. Delete the photo.

_____ Say yes and laugh along, even though you know your friend will be upset.

_____ Send the photo to one of your friends but make them promise not to share it.

5. The new kid in class is sitting by him/herself at lunchtime. You:

_____ Tell one of the unpopular kids in the class they should make friends with the new kid.

_____ Smile at them and keep walking.

_____ Keep looking and pointing at them, talking to your friends about them and making fun of them for sitting by themselves.

_____ Invite them to come and join your group.