

Being in right relationships with others is an important part of having a great quality of life. Can you think of a time when you felt supported or rejected by a friend?

- Write a short recount of one of these times.
- What did your friend do that made you feel good or bad?
- What was your response to what your friend did?
- What did you learn about friendships from that experience?